

SPOTLIGHT On Boston

by Clint Hamblin

Gaslight, Brasserie du Coin

Gaslight, Brasserie du Coin recently opened in the South End, and this “brasserie on the corner” is The Aquitaine Group’s latest addition to Boston’s restaurant scene. Located at 560 Harrison Avenue, Gaslight is open daily serving lunch, dinner, late-night “supper” and brunch on the weekends. Various menus include classic French brasserie cuisine prepared by Chef de Cuisine Christopher Robins, and – hold on to your hats – this South End restaurant offers free parking in its adjacent lot. Visit www.gaslight560.com for more information.

“I have the best job,” says Arturo of Arturo Photo located at 31 Fairfield Street, and who would disagree with this Boston photographer? Arturo photographs some of Boston’s most beautiful people, delectable food and distinguished cigars. Cigars? Yup, I said cigars, and if you happened to catch Jay Leno on The Tonight Show recently, you might have seen Leno poking fun at Arturo’s photo for his newest client. “I had recently signed with Argenese Cigars to photograph a weekly ad campaign, and one of the magazine ads got picked up by Jay Leno,” Arturo said.

What was so funny? Beats me, but maybe Arturo can tell you. Visit www.arturophoto.com for more information.

Safar’s “One Night in Paris” cocktail party

Serge Safar of Safar Coiffures Salon and more than 300 guests celebrated at Safar’s “One Night in Paris” cocktail party held at Mantra featuring a display of the latest fall fashions from Newbury Street’s I Boutique. This stunning crowd was so overdressed and processed, they should have appeared on the runway instead of the conservative fall fashion show.
